34

Contents

7 Pandemics and Politics Adam Roberts

Trust in leadership is essential because struggles against infectious diseases necessitate a degree of individual sacrifice for the social good.

Commentary

41 The Rohingya Crisis: Can ASEAN Salvage Its Credibility? Rebecca Barber and Sarah Teitt

In spite of ASEAN's perceived inertia, there appears to be domestic pressure in key member states for a more activist approach.

55 The New Threat to the Test-Ban Treaty Edward Lfft

A US nuclear-test explosion would violate the United States' interpretation of the CTBT and open the door to resumed testing by other countries, particularly North Korea.

65 Is Donald Trump America's First Constructivist President? Christopher J. Fettweis

Trump's accidental presidency is an ideal test of the strength and robustness of the international-relations canon.

76 Noteworthy

Security Upgrades

79 Saving Strategic Arms Control Alexey Arbatov

Without proper attention, the arms-control system – built during the previous half-century but neglected over the last several years – will continue to disintegrate.

105 Battalions to Brigades: The Future of European Defence Sven Biscop

Enhancing the employability of Europe's armies turns on the creation of permanent multinational force packages, with national brigades serving as the building blocks.

Threat Confusion

119 The Strategic Implications of China's Weak Cyber Defences Greg Austin

China has far less incentive than the United States to conduct the sort of military campaign in which overall military success depends on success in cyber defence.
